REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: the primary reason for allowance is that the cited prior art fails to disclose or reasonably suggest following drying of the green ceramic structural body, heating the green ceramic in a first phase in an oxidizing atmosphere to a temperature and for a time to enable sequential removal of the organic compounds such that the organic compound with a first weight loss onset temperature of lowest value is substantially removed prior the organic compound with the subsequent higher weight loss onset temperature as recited in claim 1, or at a temperature and time to substantially remove an oil or oil base compound prior to release of a binder as recited in claim 16, or heating the green ceramic at a temperature at or above the first onset weight loss of an oil or oil based compound but below a second onset weight loss temperature of an organic binder for a time to enable substantial removal of the oil or oil based compound, followed by further heating to remove the binder as recited in claim 24.

As further noted by applicant in the substitute brief on appeal dated 6/16/06:

"Thus, the mere presence of a 90% distillation temperature below 225°C, does not dictate that the organic compound with the first weight loss onset temperature of the lowest value will necessarily be substantially removed prior to the organic compound with the subsequent higher weight loss onset temperature. Substantial removal is accomplished in the present invention, for example, by slowing down the kiln temperature ramp rate below the 90% distillation temperature for a sufficient time to allow the first organic compound to be substantially removed in the firing cycle before initiation of the burning out of the second while controlling the O<sub>2</sub> content of the furnace. (See Fig. 2). Accordingly, following drying, substantial removal will not "necessarily" occur following the teachings of Beall."

"Unless the firing conditions are controlled appropriately, substantial removal will not necessarily be obtained."

Art Unit: 1731

Hence, the firing noted by Beall does not provide sufficient process parameters to imply or deduct that sequential removal of the organic compounds occurs.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
